CHILDREN'S INSTITUTIONS

The Ministry of Community and Social Services makes grants towards the construction or acquisition of buildings for these programs. It also subsidizes approximately 80% of the average daily cost of operation for children placed by their parents or youth admitted on their own request.

This Act does not include residential treatment centres.

The Ministry of Community and Social Services makes grants towards the construction or acquisition of buildings for these programs. It also subsidizes approximately 60% of the average daily cost of operation for children placed by their parents or youth admitted on their own request.

This Act does not include residential treatment centers.

THE CHILDREN'S INSTITUTIONS ACTResidences for Temporary Care

These programs serve children who are in need of temporary placement. Most children are placed in these homes by the parents, when a family crisis necessitates the youngster's residing outside the home. In most cases the residence arranges to accommodate all the children in a family.

THE CHILDREN'S INSTITUTIONS ACTResidences for Troubled Children

These programs serve school children who are troubled and may be mildly disturbed. They generally exhibit behaviour that makes them unacceptable in their own home or a foster home. Nevertheless, it is expected that they will be able to benefit by a residential setting until they can return to the community.

THE CHILDREN'S BOARDING HOMES ACTHomes for Retarded Children

These homes serve retarded children who can benefit from a small community setting. These may include multiple handicapped children who will require a good deal of help with care. Other homes serve retarded children who can function in a school setting and can benefit from living in a community. Some homes may provide schooling on the premises whereas others will send children to the neighbourhood school for the retarded.
